9. HOLABIRD GIVES HONORABLE DISCHARGE TO LIVE PROBLEM:

Major Douglas Logan visited us on 25 April in search of training materials on the art of elicitation. We discussed our various papers on the subject and promised Doug to give him as much help as we could. He also asked for films on Briefing and Debriefing and we promised to take up the matter with OCR/Graphics and advise him on the types of films available.

As a "by the way" topic I asked Doug if USAINTS was using The Live Situation Problem [] which we had prepared for them in November 1961. He said that the school's crowded schedule and short training period had not permitted them to incorporate the Problem into their program. Several days later the materials were returned to the fold. Remembering Col. Leyden's wild enthusiasm for the Problem, his dogged determination to have it for USAINTS and our own tortuous channeling of it through the security barriers of the FI and CI staffs I am led to conclude that the urgency of insurgency must have submerged this very fine problem in basic tradecraft. Although we are not inclined to "peddle" this training exercise in the community we wish to note that should DIA desire a copy there is now one available for passing outside the Agency.

and old file cabinets onto the new open shelving in the vault. He is using this opportunity to accomplish a minor re-organization of the material to facilitate its use for research purposes. It will take careful planning to provide enough space in our half of the vault to accommodate the 45 cartons of material we still have in temporary storage at the Records Center. [] [] asked [] if he could show our vault to others in OTR who have records management problems. He feels that Hellen and [] have organized a model vault. Although the organization is somewhat embryonic at the moment, we are proud of our reputation and will be glad to show off the arrangement of our wares.
